ONE MAN SLAIN IN A FIGHT OVER A DOG.

John Combs, Freight Car Inspector, Kills August Schmittgen, a Watchman.

PUTS FIVE BULLETS INTO HIM.

Combs Struck Schmittgen's Bull Pup and the Owner Resented It-Prisoner Says He Fired in Self-Defease.

As the result of a quarrel over a building John Combs a freight car inspector living at No. 2138 Fugenia street, last night shot and Instantly killed August Schmittgen, a watchman for the Merchants' Terminal Hailway Association, who lived at No. 2807 Wyoming street. The shooting occurred at 9:50 o'clock in a railroad shed at Bromen avenue and Hall street.

The men had been friends for a long time and met daily in the discharge of their luties. Schmittgen owned a builder which i e took about the yards with him at night. Yesterday morning, shortly after 5 c'clock, Combs was passing through the varda with a lantern. He met Schmittgen with his dog and stopped to talk with him. Schmittgen playfully set his deg on his friend.

The animal evidently thought its master tas in carocst and sprang flereely at ombs, who avoided it, and struck it with his duntern. The blow hurt the dog, which gen, who swore at Combs, and told him if he hit his dog, he would have to hit him or take a heating. Hot words were exchanged by the two men, and a fight probably would have resulted on the spot and not a freight train passed slong just then.

Quarrel Was Renewed. Combs wanted to go in the direction in which the train was rowing, and jumped aboard. Schmittgen tried to drag him from the cars, but was prevented by the con-yould get him later, and teach him to hit his dog.

Combs says that he thought nothing more of the haddent and in the evening about 2:20, when he went back to the yards, he dropped in at the shed, which the watch-men use as a headquetters, to talk with Schmittsen. The watchman started at once to abuse him, he says, and stated that no man could hit his dog without having him to deal with him. An argument followed, in which Schmittgen stated that his dog never

Combs offered to bet Schmittgen a soft of ciction that the dog had bitten people about the yards, and said that if he would go over to his office they could sign the go over to his office they could sign the bet. The men started off tegether and had gotten as far as the shed at litemen ave-nue when they met a yard clerk. Combs salled to him and asked if Schmittgen's dog had not bitten him.

The cierk answered that the building had butten him on the leg a few nights before. This stal ment enraged Schmittgen and he angrily declared that Combs and the cars angrily declared that Combs and the clark were both looking for trouble and that he would give it to them. A fight followed, in which Schmittgen struck Combs head with his club. Combs drew his revolver and fired at Schmittgen until all the chambers were empty. Five Bullets Took Effect.

All five bullets took effect and Schmittgen dropped to the ground. An ambulance was called, but the wounded man had expired before it arrived. His body was taken to the morgue. It was found that he was shot in the seek, right groin, abdomen, left arm and right left.

After the shooting Combs walked to the Sixth District Police Station at Ninth and Angelica streets. He calmiy entered the station, and, walking up to the desk, informed the Sergeant in charge that he had shot a man and wanted to surrender. When seen by a Republic reporter Combs said that he had acted in self delense, he said that Schmittigen had threatened to kill him and that be believed it was a question of one of them being killed.
